Dr. François Delerue is an Assistant Professor of Law and a member of the Jean Monnet Centre of Excellence for Law and Automation (Lawtomatic) at IE University. He is also an Associate Fellow of The Hague Program on International Cyber Security and the GEODE Center (Paris 8 University). Additionally, he is a Co-chair of the Committee on Digital Challenges for International Law for the preparation of the 150th Anniversary Conference of the International Law Association. His book 'Cyber Operations and International Law' was published by Cambridge University Press in 2020 and was awarded the 2021 Book Prize of the European Society for International Law.

Dr. Delerue conducts research focusing predominantly on the application of international law to cyberspace. More broadly, he is interested in how new technologies and activities (space activities, cyber, robotics and artificial intelligence) challenge international law and international relations. Dr. Delerue regularly lectures at Sciences Po, the International Institute for Humanitarian Law at Sanremo (Italy), the French War College (École de Guerre) and in the Master in Cybersecurity of the French Military Academy of Saint-Cyr. He is frequently invited to present at conferences and give guest lectures internationally.

Prior to joining IE University, Dr. Delerue worked as a Senior Researcher in Cybersecurity Governance at Leiden University and as a Research Fellow in Cyberdefense and International Law at the Institute for Strategic Research (Institut de Recherche Stratégique de l'École Militaire – IRSEM, Paris, France) of the French Ministry of Defense.

He holds a Master of Laws from the Sorbonne Law School (Paris 1 University), an LL.M. in Comparative, European and International Laws from the European University Institute (EUI, Florence, Italy) and a Ph.D. in Law from the EUI.

SUBJECT DESCRIPTION

Public International Law is a legal system, which regulates relations between States and the operations of a number of international organizations. Today Public international law regulates a wide range of issues, such as international security, the protection of human rights, international humanitarian law or international criminal law.

International law is a comparatively recent phenomenon in the history of law. Thus, the first part of the course begins with a discussion about why international law exists, what it is and what is the difference between international law and international politics. The methodology and terminology of international law will also be discussed in the first sessions. We will also examine the difference of international law from national law and the relationship between the two.

After this introduction, we will go through the basic principles of public international law. These include especially the sources of international law, the law of treaties, the definition of a State and the principle of sovereign immunity. In this first part of the course, special attention will also be given to the law of international organisations and especially to the United Nations. The role of the individual in international law will also be examined.

The second part of the course (after the mid-term exam) starts with the important issue of State responsibility and the settlement of international disputes. Here we will look at different international courts and tribunals, examining particularly the practice of the International Court of Justice. The course then moves on to the unilateral and collective use of force, international humanitarian law and human rights law. The study of some of the major issues in the international law of the sea will also be included. The course finishes with an overview of international trade law and international investment law - two branches of international law that are growing rapidly in significance.

The first part of the course will therefore be devoted to understanding the foundations of public international law and the differences, and similarities, to national law as well as to international politics. The sources of international law will be at the very core of this part of the course. The second part, on the other hand, is devoted to particular branches of public international law. This leads us to more substantial and specific issues of international law. Throughout the course, we aim at understanding the issues at hand through practical examples and class debates. Active monitoring of related news and current issues is very much encouraged.

Overall, public international law plays a vital role since it underlies many other fields of law, such as European Union Law and even domestic law. Thus, lawyers specialising in other fields of law also need to be familiar with international law in order to advise their clients effectively. Public international law is also a key topic for those specialising in international relations, as it is a fundamental tool for assessing and understanding many events taking place in the international scene.

This course is part of the Jean Monnet Center for Law and Automation, an IE University project supported by the prestigious Erasmus + Program of the European Commission.

LEARNING OBJECTIVES

- To provide students with a basic understanding of the legal rules that govern relations among States, traditional international organisations, and other international players;
- To understand how international rules are created, in particular International treaty law and customary international law;
- To acquire a basic knowledge of key concepts and rules of international law, including international rules governing the settlement of disputes and the use of force, international humanitarian law, international human rights law and international trade law;
- To describe the role of different international actors and institutions in the enactment and enforcement of international rules;
- To describe the prohibition on the use of force by referring to the Charter of the United Nations and customary international law and to identify the exceptions to that prohibition;
- To discuss the hierarchy of human rights norms and to describe the monitoring system of human rights protection at international and European level;
- To describe the main principles of international trade law and to understand their relevance for conducting business;
- To acquire a basic knowledge of key concepts and rules of international environmental law and how international law is challenged by the consequences of climate change;
- To discuss the role of international law in global governance;

TEACHING METHODOLOGY

IE University teaching method is defined by its collaborative, active, and applied nature. Students actively participate in the whole process to build their knowledge and sharpen their skills. Professor's main role is to lead and guide students to achieve the learning objectives of the course. This is done by engaging in a diverse range of teaching techniques and different types of learning activities such as the following:

Learning Activity	Weighting	Estimated time a student should dedicate to prepare for and participate in
Lectures	20.0 %	30.0 hours
Discussions	20.0 %	30.0 hours

EVALUATION CRITERIA

UNIVERSITY

CLASS PARTICIPATION (15%)

Students are expected to attend and prepare in advance for all class meetings and to participate actively in debates. The evaluation of class participation will depend on the depth and quality of the contribution, its clarity and the frequency of contributions. The contributions should demonstrate understanding and knowledge of the topic, capacity of independent analysis and reflection and ability to see the relationship between theory and practice. The contributions should be well-argued and expressed in clear manner that it is easy to follow. Students must refrain from merely repeating what has already been said by other students. They must participate in class discussions throughout the course.

WRITTEN AND/OR ORAL ASSIGNMENTS (25%)

Students will be requested to prepare group assignments. The assignments will consist of a written analysis of a case or an oral presentation in front of the class. Students are expected to engage in independent research activity in preparing the memoranda and the presentations.

Any memorandum must be delivered to the professor by the stipulated deadline. Students must upload an electronic document on the Turnitin Assignment folder created for the memorandum on IE Blackboard Ultra.

The evaluation of the memoranda will focus on whether they provide a comprehensive answer to the questions asked and how well the students reason. In addition, the document must be written in a clear and well-structured manner and it must include the relevant footnotes when referring to statements given, opinions expressed or facts provided by other authors. Copy-pastes will not be accepted, but students must demonstrate that they are capable of conducting an independent analysis and explaining facts using their own words. For possible oral presentations, the evaluation will take into consideration how well students understand the legal problem and argue their views.

MID-TERM AND FINAL EXAMS (60%)

The exams will consist of short essay or reflection questions and the resolution of cases or problem questions.

It is essential that students know and understand the key concepts and main rules and principles of the topics studied in the course. Similarly, they should be familiar with how those rules and principles are applied and enforced in practice.

The evaluation of the exam is based on similar factors as the evaluation of the written group assignments. With regard to cases or practical problems, the students must analyse a factual situation, apply the appropriate legal principles to the facts and reason their conclusion.

The mid-term exam covers the first part of the course whereas the final exam is focused on the second part of the course. ?
